◆ Tuition hike

BOT approves 15.6% tuition increase for next semester

In swift and unanimous action, the University of Maine Board of Trustees voted Wednesday to raise next semester's tuition by 15.6 percent.

The tuition increase, approved to take effect in January, is another cost-cutting measure the university system is taking in response to the proposed $11 million cut it may take.

At the UM and USM campuses in-state students will see tuition rise from $1,155 to $1,335, an increase of $180, while those from out of state will see one of $510.

In state students attending the UMaine campuses in Farmington, Augusta, Presque Isle, Machias, and Fort Kent, will experience an increase of $165. Out of state residents will see their tuition rise by $405.

"This is the most regrettable proposal I have ever had to bring before the board. I would not do so if it were not absolutely necessary to maintain the quality of education," said University of Maine Chancellor Robert Woodbury.

According to Woodbury, the Maine Educational Loan Authority has offered up to two million dollars in loan assistance to UMaine students eligible for financial aid. The loan is interest-free for twelve months and was created specifically to deal with mid-year tuition hikes.

The tuition hike the BOT approved Wednesday was the second mid-year increase to occur in the history of the UMaine system. The first such situation occurred during the 1979 oil crisis.

In an effort to convince the BOT to vote against the tuition hike, several UMaine student leaders spoke to the Trustees before the board meeting.

UMaine Student Government Stavros Mendros suggested the BOT close campuses or the chancellor's office, instead of raising tuition.

These last-minute efforts, however, were unsuccessful in persuading the BOT to reject the tuition increase in favor of other cost-cutting measures.

◆ Hitt the road

Hitt accepts Cent Florida presidency

By Michelle Hikel
Staff Writer

University of Maine Interim President John Hitt has been selected as the new president of the University of Central Florida in Orlando.

Charles Reed, chancellor of the University of Florida System, said Florida's Board of Regents "unanimously approved" Hitt's appointment to the UCF presidency Wednesday morning.

According to a prepared statement issued from his office, Hitt accepted the UCF position shortly after 10 a.m. Wednesday.

"We hope that our friends in Maine will understand that my acceptance of the Presidency at the University of Central Florida allows me to fulfill an important career goal which is not available to me in Maine," he said.

Despite being presented this eagerly-awaited opportunity, Hitt said he would miss the state of Maine and the university.

"The decision to leave the University of Maine was a difficult one for Martha [his wife] and me. We have been

Student rally urges more participation, demands BOT adopt an education agenda

By Michael Reagan
Staff Writer

A rally was held on the front steps of the Memorial Union at noon Wednesday urging students and other members of the University of Maine community to keep pressuring the Board of Trustees, the State Legislature, and Gov. McKernan to help preserve the UMaine System.

"We can't take that $11 million

Anderson said he was concerned about students who are unable to attend UMaine and might be deprived of an education.

State Representative John O'Dea, D-Orono, who represents the UMaine as part of his district, did not think there was enough opposition from members of the UMaine system.

"When the University System people, the chancellor and the Board of Trustees went into the appropriback, but we can influence the way it is cut and if nothing else, understand where the cuts are coming from," said Kurt Anderson, vice-president of the Off-Campus Board and an organizer of the protest.

David Carlson, editor of Hubris who also organized the rally, wanted the Board of Trustees to have people "who have a definite education agenda."

"We need people who will work with the students and who have ideas and values that will benefit students in particular, not big business in Maine and not authority in Maine," he said.

He also mentioned fee increases as well as rising tuition as making expenses more difficult for students, especially as more and more students take five years to graduate.

tions work session, they went in and lost $11 million in nine minutes without a whimper," he said.

"There wasn't even a protest," O'Dea said. "That's what we're dealing with."

He criticized the recent purchase of 22 cars by UMaine, saying the BOT has not informed the universities in the UMaine system that such days are over. O'Dea later said most of those cars were sent back.

Andrew Levesque, chair of the University of Southern Maine Student Government, said the only way tuition increases should occur is if two conditions are fulfilled.

The first, he said, was that all extra money left over from cuts should go into undergraduate and graduate programs. The second was scholarship programs to be started by the BOT.

"If they're business leaders they'll find money to help us remain part of the active community in the state," he said.

At the rally copies of Hubris, which had the addresses of the members of the BOT, were distributed to the crowd so they could be written to or called. A "monkey wrench," a list which suggested ways of protesting, was also distributed.

"We're trying to advocate a less than polite way," Carlson said. "It seems to attract a little more attention."

◆ Soviet Union

CIA monitoring of Soviet Union stepped up due to ethnic feuding

1 WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is watching the "former Soviet Union" like never before because of the threat to peace resulting from an uncertain mix of ethnic feuding and 30,000 nuclear warheads, says the new CIA chief.

In his first speech to CIA employees since taking office Nov. 12, Robert Gates also said Wednesday that the intelligence community is embarking on the most sweeping changes it has undergone in more than 40 years.

Gates said the intelligence community was producing 10 reports within three weeks to help the administration understand the Soviet disintegration.

"There is no precedent in history for an empire as vast as that of Russia or the Soviet Union imploding so suddenly," Gates told CIA workers.

Having spent $2 trillion to defeat Communism, the United States now faces a different menace — one with "potentially large-scale civil disorder and breakdown of social discipline," which still possesses some 30,000 nuclear warheads, Gates said.

"We must mind the lessons of history when empires collapse, and forewarn of the dangers — as well as the opportunities," he said. The text of the speech was made available to demonstrate Gates' promise of more openness about the work of the CIA.

◆ Donation

Former senator donating homestead to UMaine

3 OLD TOWN (AP) — Former Maine Senate President Joseph Sewall plans to donate his 155-year-old homestead, including a large house and seven acres, to the University of Maine.

Sewall, who is building a new home in Orono, said he decided to donate the property to the university because his only son has a home of his own and because it seemed like a nice gesture. The university may use it to house the president of the nearby Orono campus or as a conference center.

"Not too many people want to take on a house like that," said Sewall, a Bowdoin College alumnus with family ties to the university.

◆ Murder investigation

Blunt end of axe was used as murder weapon

4 KITTERY (AP) — Police have answered two final questions in the case of a woman who killed her husband, torched their house and committed suicide, a spokesman for the Department of Public Safety said Wednesday.

Police determined Freda Howard used the blunt end of an ax to bludgeon her husband to death, spokesman Stephen McCausland said. Authorities also have determined the substance she used to burn his body and start a fire in their home was cigarette lighter fluid, he said.

The couple's bodies were found in the burning home by firefighters last Friday.

McCausland said a motive for the crime may never be determined.

◆ Suicide attempt

Milli Vanilli member released from hospital

5 LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rob Pilatus of the disgraced lip-synching rock duo Milli Vanilli is out of the hospital following days of observation after what sheriff's deputies said appeared to be a suicide attempt.

Pilatus, 27, left Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in good condition Tuesday night, said Ron Wise, a hospital spokesman.

Pilatus took pills and straddled a hotel's ninth-floor balcony rail Saturday before he was taken into custody by sheriff's deputies and placed under 72 hour hospital observation.

◆ Freedom of dress

Conservative dress code giving Mickey a dowdy image in France

2 PARIS (AP) — A government agency filed a complaint over Euro-Disneylands' employee dress code, contending that bans on beards, mustaches and colored hosiery may violate France's work code, newspapers reported Tuesday.

Police in Vincennes, in the Val de Marne district where Euro-Disneyland is located, have opened a preliminary investigation based on the complaint, filed last week by the Work Inspection Agency.

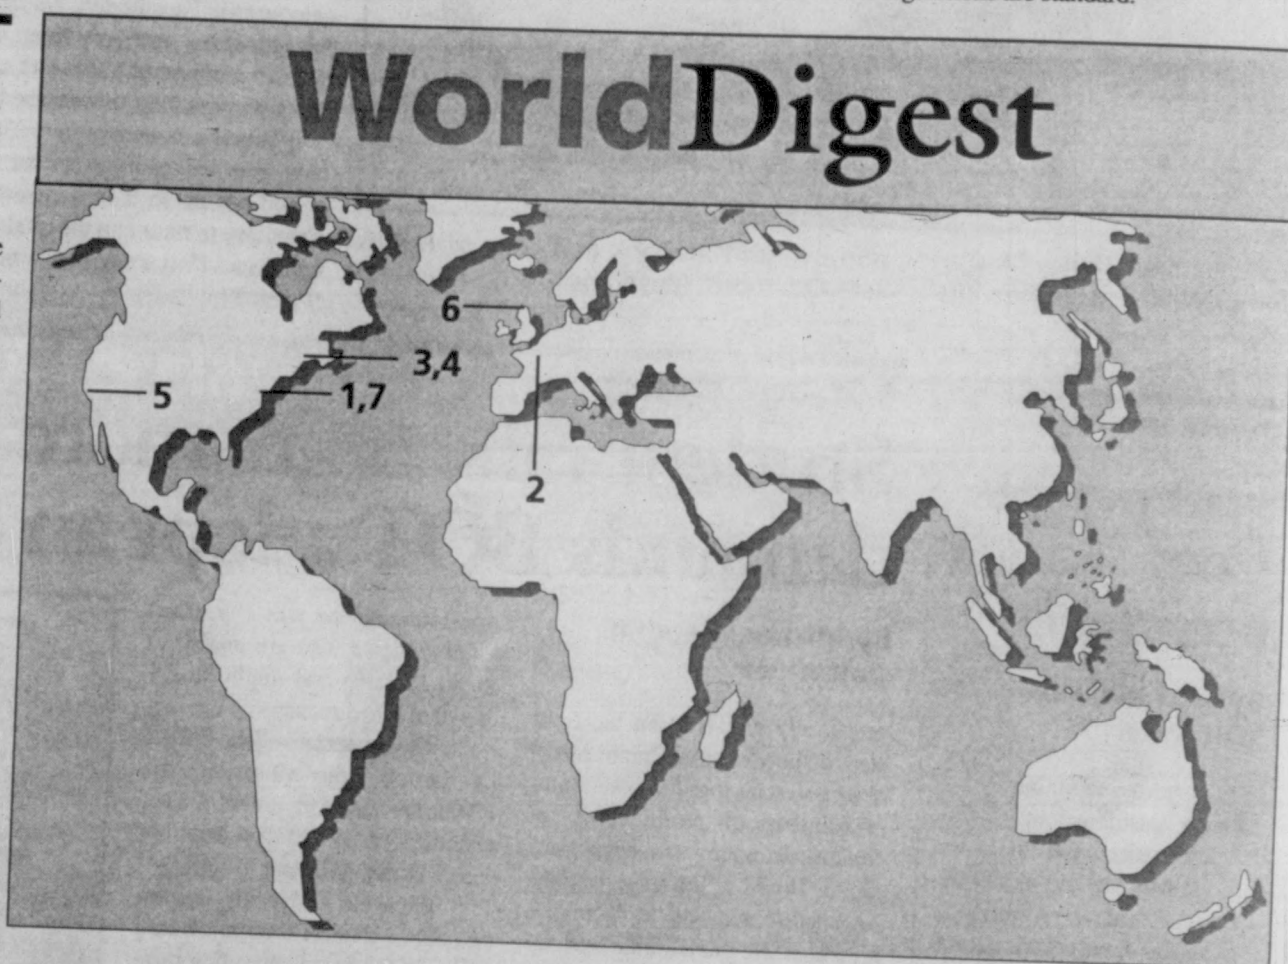

The dress code has been a source of controversy since Euro-Disneyland, which is to open to the public in April, began hiring of employees early this year.

The dress code, outlined in an internal document to be signed by all new employees, provides a list of "dos" and "don'ts" that critics say represent an attack on personal liberties.

"One of the conditions of your employment consists of maintaining weight in harmony with your height," the code says.

It also outlaws beards and mustaches for men and eyeliner, eyeshadow, false eyelashes, colored stockings and certain heel heights for women. It also says underclothing should be "appropriate."

Euro-Disney officials argue that employees are all members of a theatrical production and must be able at any given moment to play traditional Disney roles. Officials have compared its requirements to those of an airline where dress regulations are standard.

◆ Ireland

IRA bomb injures 23 in Belfast hotel

6 BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — An IRA bomb exploded in central Belfast overnight, injuring 23 people and causing heavy damage to a hotel and the Grand Opera House, police said.

Police headquarters in Belfast said in a statement that the injured included 13 police officers, two soldiers of the British army's locally recruited Ulster Defense Regiment and eight civilians.

In a statement relayed to news media, the Irish Republican Army said the bomb contained 1,000 pounds of explosives and was directed at "no specific target."

Police said the bomb in a van exploded in a side street between the Europa Hotel and the opera house 25 minutes after a caller telephoned police with a warning.

They said scores of security force personnel helped evacuate more than 1,000 people from the hotel, the opera house, nearby pubs and other premises.

The explosion caused extensive damage to the hotel and opera house, and to the headquarters of the Ulster Unionist Party, the main Protestant party in Northern Ireland. Windows were shattered 500 yards away.

◆ Persian Gulf

US Army may store equipment in Oman

7 WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Army will be allowed to preposition some military equipment in the Persian Gulf state of Oman, says Rep. Patricia Schroeder.

Although the Pentagon has sought approval to store military supplies in several Persian Gulf nations since the end of the war against Iraq, no formal agreement with Oman has been disclosed by the administration.

Pacts with Kuwait and Bahrain were announced earlier this year.

During the war, Oman allowed the U.S. Air Force to use its airfields to deliver supplies to the allied forces. It also provided crucial support to U.S. naval vessels during the conflict.

Schroeder told a group of reporters she supported the concept of prepositioning U.S. military equipment overseas as a way to cut the cost of basing Americans in foreign countries.

She is a senior member of the House Armed Services Committee and heads its subcommittee on military installations.

Andrews wants defense with environmental concerns

By Frank Spurr
Staff Writer

U. S. Rep. Thomas H. Andrews called for the development of a national defense policy which incorporates environmental concerns as a part of U.S. national security.

In a speech in Hauck Auditorium at the University of Maine Thursday, Andrews (D-Portland) said consideration of the environment must be a priority when national security policy is formed as it is a critical element to maintaining world peace.

Andrews said it is urgent the public re-evaluate the relationship between defense and the environment.

"The quality of life in this country, the vitality of our economy, the well-being of our people and the purity, safety and health of our environment must be the definition of national defense and national security in the 1990s and into the next century. If we assault the environment and if we deny the opportunity to our people, then in fact, we are assaulting the security and defense of the United States of America," Andrews said.

Andrews said this reassessment is necessary in the United States, but said the country must also focus its attention on environmental issues on a global scale, especially in Third World countries which face other problems such as poverty, population explosions and pollution.

Once these issues become evident "It becomes very clear that we can no longer afford the status quo of allowing environmental degradation," he said.

Andrews said the U.S. Department of Defense has provided a "working laboratory" of what happens when the United States has tough environmental laws but chose not to enforce them.

"We have now the costly evidence of what happens when we turn our back on the environment," Andrews said.

Andrews listed several examples of facilities which are in environmental chaos, including the Hanford Nuclear Facility [Wash]. The problems facing Hanford include:

- 444 billion gallons of radioactive water and liquid waste in the grounds.
- 700,000 cubic yards of radioactive solid wastes.
- 177 underground storage tanks which contain plutonium and other radioactive elements, of which "at least 66 of these tanks are leaking," he said.

Andrews said it would cost $30 billion to clean up the 40-year-old facility.

Andrews also said Loring Air Force Base in Limestone, Me. suffers from similar environmental problems including 42 hazardous waste sites containing various fuels, pesticides, and heavy metals. It will cost at least a quarter of a billion dollars to clean up the facility, he said. Besides Loring, there are 76 hazardous waste sites at military installations in Maine out of the 17,842 sites across the country, according to Andrews.

"This is reality. These are facts. This is the legacy of turning our backs on clear environmental protection and regulation," he said.

Andrews said if citizens begin to see the environment as a critical ingredient in national security and the global future, then money spent on defense can be used in "new and creative ways." This money would be used for clean-up of hazardous wastes as well as for developing state-of-the-art technology to reduce the creation of hazardous and toxic materials at the source.

Andrews, a first-term member of the U.S. House of Representatives, serves on the Armed Services Committee as well as its Research and Development Subcommittee. He said while the subcommittee is overwhelmed by requests for funding for hi-tech weaponry, he proposes "we take several million dollars from that research and development pot and invest it in point-source reduction technology."

This technology would be available to anyone who wanted to use it and may be feasible now that the Cold War is over, he said.

He suggested the Department of Defense be required to make environmentally sound purchases, as it is the largest consumer of items in the world. He said if it was required to purchase energy efficient light bulbs, for example, the energy savings would be twofold. It would increase energy savings in the military and because of the volume purchased, energy efficient bulbs would eventually become cheaper for the general public, thus prompting their use and saving energy.

"You start to look at the defense department and its budget in a totally different way as being driven, not by winning the Cold War with massive nuclear weapons of destruction, but driven by the need to refine our economy, create opportunity for our people, and make our planet and our country safe," Andrews said.

Action on the environment is urgent and the stakes are extraordinarily high, but Andrews believes people want a change from "politics as usual" and are ready for a new direction.

"What it will take is the activism and involvement of every single one of us to make certain that this country makes the right decisions during this very critical time in our history. And not only are our lives at stake, but our children's and our grandchildren's lives are at stake," Andrews said.

Construction

Geology department building to be built in spring of 1992

Next spring, the Department of Geological Sciences will put on its hard hat and join the construction craze at University of Maine.

According to Bradford Hall, chair of the geological sciences department, plans are being made to build a new geological sciences building between Libby Hall and the Sawyer Environmental Research Center.

The geological sciences department is currently located in Boardman Hall which also houses the departments of civil, mechanical, and surveying engineering.

Hall said the new building will have three floors and be approximately the size of the Sawyer Environmental Research Center and will be used for teaching and research."

The new building will be located between Libby Hall and the Sawyer Environmental Research Center.

According to Hall the $5 million for the construction of the building came from a bond issue that was passed in 1987, and no name has been decided upon for the building yet.

Bob Whelan, executive assistant to the vice president of academic affairs, said three construction projects on campus stem from ing currently under construction behind Shibles Hall, the "connector" building between Memorial Union and the Maine Center for the Arts, and for the new geological sciences building.

He said money for the construction of these three buildings came from private fund raising.

According to Whelan, a rough sketch of the geological sciences building has been made and designers are "in the process of doing detailed design."

"We want to break ground in the spring time," he said.

◆ Hostage release

Last American hostage, Terry Anderson, is free

By Ed Blanche
Associated Press Writer

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) - Journalist Terry Anderson, the last American hostage in Lebanon, was set free Wednesday by pro-Iranian Islamic radicals and said faith and stubbornness helped him survive the nearly seven-year ordeal.

His release ended a brutal saga in which Shiite Muslims kept 13 Americans in chains, killed three and bedeviled two U.S. presidencies.

A joyous Anderson grinned broadly, raised his arms and warmly greeted friends as he entered a conference room at the Syrian Foreign Ministry. He later left to meet his 6-year-old daughter, Sulome, for the first time.

Anderson said sheer determination got him through his captivity.

"You just do what you have to do. You wake up every day, summon up the energy from somewhere ... and you get through the day, day after day after day," said the AP's chief Middle East correspondent.

"I was lucky enough to have other people with me most of the time. ... My faith. Stubbornness, I guess," Anderson said.

His appearance was delayed for hours. U.N. officials said they believed he had been delayed by a snowstorm in Lebanon.

Anderson's kidnappers turned him over to Syrian security officials who delivered him to U.S. Ambassador Christopher Ross in Damascus.

Anderson, wearing a white shirt and a dark cardigan he received only Tuesday from his captors, joked about tight-fitting shoes. He said they were his first new pair since he was kidnapped.

"You can't imagine how glad I am to see you," an emotional Anderson told reporters. "I've thought about this moment for a long time and now it's here, and I'm scared to death. I don't know what to say." He hugged and kissed Alex Efty, an AP correspondent.

Ending the news conference, he explained: "I have a date with a couple of beautiful ladies and I'm already very late." He was referring to Sulome and her mother, Madeleine.

Asked what his last words to his kidnappers were, he rolled his eyes and said simply: "Goodbye."

Anderson was to leave later in the evening for Wiesbaden, Germany, where recently released hostages Joseph Cicippio and Alann Steen are resting and undergoing medical examinations. Anderson was being accompanied by Larry E. Heinzerling, AP's deputy director of the World Services division.

A U.S. military doctor in Wiesbaden said Steen suffered brain damage and was subject to periodic seizures because he was kicked in the head during his captivity.

The release of the three Americans ended the agonizing hostage drama for the United States. Two Germans still are held in Lebanon and U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar his work would not be over until they are released.

"I am very pleased," he said. "The American chapter has been closed, but I have other chapters still to close."

President Bush called Terry Anderson in Damascus "to express the love and admiration that all Americans have for Terry," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

Frank Reed, who spent two years in captivity with Anderson, said from Malden, Mass., that Anderson's release truly freed all hostages once held in Lebanon.

"For me, today is the first day you can officially call an ex-hostage, now that Terry's free," Reed said. "Thank God almighty we're all free at last."

A flurry of contradictory reports early in the day about Anderson's whereabouts mirrored the agonizing cycle of raised and dashed hopes for release from his 2,455-day ordeal.

"It's been like a big roller coaster ride," Anderson's 36-year-old brother John said from his home in Ocala, Fla. "But that's the way it's been for almost seven years."

The confusion arose after a five-page Arabic-language statement from the Islamic Jihad group announced that he would be set free. But its wording was unclear as to whether he had already been released.

Anderson said in a videotaped statement released Wednesday by his captors to the AP in Damascus that he was to be freed.

"After finishing several stages we decided to separate the issue of our captives from the hostages in the prisons of the enemy and we're going to free our last captive, Terry Anderson, thus folding this page in the hostage file before glorious Christmas," the statement said.

The Islamic Jihad said in its statement that the "confrontation" created by the kidnappings made the world listen to the voice of oppressed peoples and unmasked the "ugly American and Israeli faces."

Anderson's sister, Peggy Say, said also she got a phone call from Bush, who promised to give her a "big hug soon," Mrs. Say crisscrossed the globe meeting with world leaders, terrorists and spies in a dogged campaign to free her brother.

"He's one of us," said Louis D. Boccardi, the AP's president and chief executive officer. "I think the thing that marks the AP's reaction is everyone in the AP felt a tremendous solidarity with him." Boccardi was in Germany to greet Anderson.

◆ Presidential campaign

Divisions among GOP to be factors in '92

WASHINGTON (AP) — Divisions among Republicans and alienation among Americans over 50 are on the rise and likely to be major factors in the 1992 elections, according to a poll analysis released Tuesday.

The study by the Times Mirror Center for the People and the Press also indicates that pride in the Persian Gulf War victory may be strong enough to shield President Bush from the impact of widespread economic concerns among voters.

Among the few things Republicans agreed on, the center said, were that the Gulf War showed the country can still accomplish things and Bush and Reagan administration policies helped speed the end of communism. Those ideas also won general approval from a majority of the 2,020 people.

"The broad-based Gulf appeal can reach voters at all points on the political spectrum," the pollsters said.

They speculated it may be most useful in rekindling the loyalty of Republicans who are otherwise unhappy with Bush and the course of the country. Forty-eight percent of Republicans said they were satisfied with the way things were going, down from 64 percent when Bush took office in January 1989.

"The loss of faith in the way things are going in the country is most evident among GOP stalwarts who hold populist values" and least evident among pro-business, fiscally conservative Republicans, the center said.

◆ More presidential campaign

Duke announces he's running for president

By John King
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — David Duke is launching a renegade Republican campaign against President Bush in selected primaries, hoping to garner enough support to be a voice at the party's national convention next summer.

The former Ku Klux Klan grand wizard and Nazi sympathizer was announcing his plans in Washington today, less than three weeks after his landslide loss in the Louisiana governor's race. In his defeat, Duke won the majority of white votes as he sounded many of the national GOP's themes.

Aides said Duke would concentrate on Southern and Southwestern primaries scheduled for early March, with an eye on states with delegate formulas favorable to challengers.

It will be Duke's second presidential campaign. He ran in several Democratic primaries in 1988, barely causing a ripple.

Since then, however, he has won a seat in the Louisiana Legislature and run twice statewide, getting a surprising 44 percent last year in losing a Senate race and 39 percent - roughly 680,000 votes - in last month's gubernatorial election.

Duke, 41, calls his Klan activity a youthful indiscretion and says Christianity has helped him moderate his views. Now, instead of blaming minorities for social problems, Duke rails against a welfare system he says perpetuates poverty while driving up middle-class taxes.

As a state legislator, Duke has called for requiring welfare mothers to use birth control. His positions during the gubernatorial campaign were less controversial.

Duke blamed the "welfare underclass" for much of Louisiana's crime, drug and poverty problems and said the middle class was unfairly being forced to foot the bill. He also termed the federal civil rights legislation a "civil wrongs" bill and railed against hiring quotas.

seriously threaten Bush's nomination. The president's strength as an incumbent president and GOP delegate rules that heavily favor primary winners stack the deck against any challenger.

But Duke's candidacy and the expected challenge from conservative commentator Patrick J. Buchanan would force Bush to defend himself against attacks from the right during a primary season the White House had hoped could be spent preparing for the

Now, instead of blaming minorities for social problems, Duke rails against a welfare system he says perpetuates poverty while driving up middle-class taxes.

Critics say he has masked his racism in an effort to creep into the political mainstream.

"The problem is not the message," said Mary Matalin, chief of staff for the Republican National Committee. "But in Duke's case the messenger is a racist bigot."

Among the states where Duke is considering entering primaries are Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, Oklahoma and Texas. He also may run in Maryland and is studying ballot-access and delegates rules in several other states, according to aides.

It is highly unlikely that Duke could fall campaign.

"We're going to keep George Bush honest, to make him address the conservative agenda," said Duke aide Marc Ellis. "We have a lot of eager people in contact with us." Ellis said Duke's goal has to win enough delegates to be a voice at the GOP's August convention.

Not surprisingly, Bush supporters are sharpening their attacks on Duke.

"This guy has never held a job in his life," Matalin said Monday. "He has no other means of making a living than bilking poor voters for money."

◆ Mideast peace conference

Peace conference starts in DC without Israelis

By Barry Schweid
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mideast peace talks recessed in less than an hour Wednesday amid recriminations on both sides. Israel defended its decision not to attend the opening session and suggested technical discussions in the coming days.

Palestinian delegates rushed back to the State Department to discuss the Israeli proposal.

"We have suggested holding a meeting to talk about logistics, so that when our delegations get here Monday we can save time," said an Israeli official speaking on condition of anonymity.

The Israeli delegation is expected to arrive Sunday.

The State Department also expressed disappointment with the false start and said it would keep trying to bring the two sides together this week. It invited all parties for a 10 a.m. Thursday session.

The State Department slammed the government of Shamir for starting up a new settlement on the once Arab-held West Bank.

"Settlements are an obstacle to peace," spokeswoman Margaret D. Tutwiler said. "We are particularly disturbed at this development on the eve of the resumption of bilateral talks."

Israeli Ambassador Zalman Shoval said the United States no longer would function as a "mailman." Benjamin Netanyahu, a close aide to Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, said the Arabs had asked U.S. officials to convey a list of 15 proposals to Israel and were turned down.

"We told them, 'take it to Israel,'" Netanyahu quoted an unidentified U.S. official as saying.

State Department spokeswoman Tutwiler said she was "totally unaware there is a change in the U.S. role as a co-sponsor" with the Soviet Union of the Mideast peace talks. Moreover, she added "No one has asked us to change."

Shamir dropped his demand for staggering Israel's negotiations with the three Arab delegations.

"We are willing to conduct all talks as of the 9th of December," a Shamir spokesman said after Shamir consulted with Foreign Minister David Levy and Defense Minister Moshe Arens.

All three Arab delegations — Syrian, Lebanese and a joint Jordanian-Palestinian group — showed up at 10 a.m., and went to three different State Department rooms.

The Syrians and Lebanese remained for about 20 minutes. The Jordanians and Palestinians stayed for about an hour. The Israelis did not appear.

"It's disappointing that the Israeli delegations failed to show up," Ms. Tutwiler said.

She said the offices would be made available on Thursday and Friday. "We will be open for business every day," Ms. Tutwiler said.

"What is most important now is that the parties move beyond procedural differences and wrangling and engage directly with one another in direct bilateral negotiations," she said.

Asked why the United States persisted the spokeswoman replied: "We are going to maintain the integrity of our good-faith proposal."

"We did not accomplish anything ... We are waiting for the others to come and we hope they will come," said the head of the Jordanian delegation, Abdul Salam Majali.

"We are very much disappointed the other side did not appear," Syria's chief envoy Muwaffak Allaf said as his delegation departed.

Bushra Kanafana, the Syrian embassy spokeswoman, said: "We have no definite plans yet. We are very serious about this peace process. We do not believe the peace process should crumble because Israel did not show on the 4th. We want the process alive."

Asked whether Syria would be attending the negotiations next week, she replied: "I am not saying anything. We haven't reached a decision."

Israeli diplomat Netanyahu declared: "The Arabs are playing games. They go to a room knowing it's empty, but they don't pick up the phone to call us."

◆ African unrest

Soldiers attempt to oust prime minister in Togo

LOME, Togo (AP) — Soldiers seeking to force Gen. Gnassingbe Eyadema back to power used tanks and rockets to blast into the civilian government palace Tuesday and seize the reformist prime minister, killing at least 17 people.

Eyadema issued a statement saying Prime Minister Joseph Koffigoh was brought to him for discussions. A radio report late Tuesday said the two agreed to form a coalition government and ordered the troops back to their barracks.

The report by Togo radio did not say who would be in the "national unity government," but Eyadema and his troops clearly were in control. Koffigoh apparently remained in the custody of the rebel soldiers.

The United States and France, the former colonial ruler of Togo, strongly condemned the attack on the 4-month-old interim government. French officials declined to comment on the possibility of military intervention, which Koffigoh previously called for.

Koffigoh supporters said Western nations' support for democracy in Africa was being tested by the effort to restore Eyadema to power. In the past two years, 21 African governments have been forced by unrest, civil wars and Western aid cutoffs to agree at least in principle to permit multiparty democracy.

◆ Hostage release

Anderson's release ends 12 years of hostages in Middle East

By George Esper
AP Special Correspondent

The release of the last of America's Middle East hostages ends an era of anguish and anxiety, of beatings and blindfolds, of fear and frustration, of loneliness and loss, of holidays uncelebrated and deaths unmourned.

Despite the pain and deprivation they shared over nearly a decade that stretched from the mid-1980s to the early 1990s, ex-hostages say they have forgiven their captors. There is no joy in retribution, they say. Hate only kills people.

The freeing of Terry Anderson on Wednesday was the final chapter in their sad saga.

"Now each one begins his own new chapter of the life outside," said the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, one of the first hostages released, in 1986. "It's very interesting to watch how each person has moved back into the reality of the world."

Jenco, 57, a Roman Catholic priest, is campus minister at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles.

Rev. Benjamin Weir is a professor at the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, Calif. At 67, he is the oldest of the ex-hostages and was one of the first Americans kidnapped, in 1984, and released, in 1985.

Robert Polhill, 57, who lives in Arlington, Va., with his Palestinian wife, Ferial, lost his larynx to throat cancer but learned anew how to talk through his esophagus.

"They had nothing to do with my cancer," he said. "I have nothing to forgive them for. It's something that if it had been treated earlier wouldn't have been quite as bad but there's no reason to believe I would have gotten to a doctor on my own anyway."

The cancer was discovered during a physical examination shortly after his release on April 22, 1990.

"At the moment, I'm not really supporting myself," said Polhill.

"I'm working on what I've got in the bank. I don't have any job. That will come in time as I get more adjusted to my voice."

When he was abducted on Jan. 24, 1987, Polhill was assistant professor of business at Beirut University College. His darkest hour came only days later when his captors threatened to kill him.

"I actually believed them," he said. "We got a reprieve. They announced they were not going to execute us for humanitarian reasons."

Polhill does not think about his three-year ordeal. "People find that very hard to believe," he said. "I don't go looking back into the past, 'Boy, if those guys hadn't done this, I would have been so much better off.' I don't know where I would have been"

Frank Reed, who was freed a week after Polhill in 1990 after 44 months in captivity, is also jobless. He lives with his Syrian wife, Fifi, and their 11-year-old son, Tarek, in a rented apartment in Malden, Mass., near Boston.

"People call me an ex-hostage," said Reed, who turned 59 on Tuesday. "We all will still be hostage to that experience and the effects on our lives and our character and what we think about values. We had those things change."

His time in captivity, he said, made his wife and son hostages, too.

"I'm sure they probably have not had a good year with me because I won't put up with an awful lot of things. I have been sat on for four years."

What Jenco remembers the most was the tremendous sense of loneliness that overcame him in the beginning.

"You need the other person in order to survive all over the world," he said. "One man is no man."

His 18 months in captivity taught him how to live together with other hostages sealed in a room 24 hours a day, seven days a week, year in and year out.

"There are times you get angry with them," Jenco said. "One time I even wrote in my journal, 'Dear God, I'm so glad I'm not married to any of them.' When I got out, I asked their wives, 'Were they always that way?' And they said, 'Yes, they were always that way.'"

◆ Soviet breakup

Gorbachev says breakup of USSR will cause catastrophe and war

By Brian Friedman
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW—President Mikhail Gorbachev warned Tuesday that the disintegration of the Soviet Union will lead to misfortune, catastrophe and war, but Russia hastened the breakup by recognizing Ukraine's new statehood.

Saying the country was experiencing a destructive "crisis of statehood," Gorbachev urged lawmakers across the Soviet Union to approve his proposed Union Treaty.

"The breakup of such a multiethnic community will bring misfortunes upon millions of our people, which will outbalance all possible temporary benefits from secession," Gorbachev said in a statement distributed to lawmakers in all 12 republics, not just those seven who have said they will sign the treaty.

"A breakup is fraught with interethnic, interrepublic clashes, even wars," he said. "That would be a catastrophe for the entire global community."

Coming one day after Ukrainian officials announced that voters in the republic had overwhelmingly approved a referendum on independence, Gorbachev's comments amounted to a desperate plea to save some form of union as well as what little remains of his dwindling authority.

The proposed treaty would limit the Kremlin's role to foreign affairs, strategic nuclear arms and coordination of economic policy. It also would establish a five-year, directly elected presidency, an independent judiciary, and allow the republics to introduce their own currencies.

◆ Budget crisis

Appropriations Committee can't make cuts, shortfall remains

By Peter Jackson
Associated Press Writer

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Legislative leaders pondered their next move Tuesday after the Appropriations Committee abandoned attempts to forge a bipartisan accord on a deficit-fighting package for the second time in as many weeks.

The committee, which has wrestled for a month over how to avert a more than $100 million shortfall through June, ended a marathon meeting in the wee hours of the morning by voting to turn the impasse over to leadership and Gov. John R. McKernan.

"We just can't get very far in reducing these large cuts (in aid) to towns and cities," said Sen. Joseph C. Brannigan, the Portland Democrat who co-chairs the committee, referring to McKernan's controversial proposals to reduce payments to municipalities and schools by $51 million.

Legislators outside the committee may suggest "other ways to cut that we have not thought of," Sen. Michael D. Pearson, D-Enfield, said following the 7-6 vote shortly before 1 a.m.

Senate President Charles P. Pray, D-Millinocket, met with McKernan at midday and said leaders and the governor would confer by telephone later in the day. But neither Pray nor the Republican chief executive could offer much insight into what lies ahead.

"I think the Appropriations Committee is almost burnt out, if not burnt out," said Pray, noting that the panel has been under strain for a solid year now, dealing with one budget crisis after another.

Pray said he wants to have the full Legislature convene in special session this month

"We need to find out where the rest of leadership feels we ought to be going," he said, adding that he had "no reason to expect" a special session this month but that "it would be a mistake not to have one."

Last week, McKernan invoked his emergency powers to cut spending by $22.5 million through December, with nearly half the total coming from reductions in school subsidies.

said McKernan has a responsibility to advance alternatives of his own in the face of bipartisan opposition to his proposals. The Governor's refusal to offer other proposals or to call lawmakers into session is nothing more than "a convenient dodge," he said.

The committee's staff spent Tuesday trying to refine the estimates of savings produced by proposals that the committee endorsed, often in split votes that reflected little unanimity.

"We're going to price out, to our best understanding, the actions they took last night," said John Wakefield, director of fiscal and program review. The results were not expected to be ready until at least Wednesday.

The committee vote was on a motion by the panel's House chairwoman, Rep. Lorraine N. Chonko, who advocated turning over the stalemate of leadership and McKernan, as well as the rank and file. Chonko, D-Topsham, said it was pointless to continue "without having some new, fresh ideas."

Lawmakers in both the Democratic and Republican caucuses have registered strong opposition to McKernan's proposals to suspend local revenue sharing to save at least $30 million and to reduce subsidies to local school districts by another $21 million. Those are the largest items in McKernan's blueprint for wiping out a potential deficit of more than $100 million through June.

Last week McKernan invoked emergency powers to cut spending by $22.5 million through December, with nearly half the total coming from reductions in school subsidies.

for votes that will gauge rank-and-file support for alternatives to the cuts in municipal aid. He said lawmakers should act immediately to set aside savings that already have bipartisan support, then fight it out on the floor over the more controversial items.

McKernan warned that a continued lack of legislative action will force him to order even deeper unilateral spending cuts starting in January, but said he will not call a special session without unified support from leadership.

dies. McKernan has warned that limitations on his authority to act alone could mean deeper cuts in school aid in the future.

Pray and McKernan continued the partisan sparring over the role the Democrat-dominated Legislature to find alternatives to the cuts in local aid.

"I've made my proposal and the Legislature doesn't like it and can't agree on one of its own," he said.

Pray, echoing other Democratic leaders,

Democratic hopeful Jerry Brown makes first visit to Maine

PORTLAND (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate Jerry Brown enlisted supporters, fielded questions from bystanders and sipped coffee during his first, impromptu, visit to Maine on Tuesday.

The former California governor called the visit a time to "plant the seeds" of his campaign in Maine and fended off a complaint that he should have rounded up supporters before coming.

"First we've got to find you to get in contact with you," Brown told Colin McKenna, who said he may support the candidate.

Brown, nicknamed "Governor Moonbeam" and making his third run for the presidency, spoke at Bowdoin College in Brunswick and at Green Mountain Coffee Roasters, a popular coffee house and student hangout in Portland.

Asked what kind of coffee he would like, Brown responded "something strong."

Some who listened to the candidate, who studied Zen Buddhism and worked with Mother Theresa during a sabbatical from politics, said they liked his non-conformist views, while others were unaware he planned to visit.

"The fact he has paid his own rent and kept in touch with the common people makes you feel he's a little more in touch," Karla Horecky, 21, said after listening to Brown speak to reporters at the coffee house. "He has great ideals, but I also don't think there are enough people to support him."

Ed Johnson said he joined the campaign by calling an 800 number after seeing the candidate on the Larry King show recently.

"He speaks my language. He talks about Democracy...making the government accessible to the average citizen," Johnson said.

Johnson said the campaign in Maine "is not very well organized yet" because efforts have been concentrated on New Hampshire.

John Michael, who worked on Brown's last presidential campaign in 1980, said he helped try to drum up supporters for the visit, which was scheduled when an event in Pennsylvania was cancelled, he said.

"In the calls I made this morning, I was surprised at how much interest there was," Michael said.

Brown, a two-term governor who once dated singer Linda Ronstadt, left politics after a failed 1982 U.S. Senate bid and resurfaced in 1989 as head of California's Democratic Party.

Brown reiterated his claim that his is running against the system, not candidates from either party. He is limiting contributions to his campaign to $100 per person.

He said special interest money is strangling Democracy.

"Unless we can crack this corrupt grip in which government now stands, we're not going to have a health plan, we're not going to have an energy plan and we're not going to put America back to work," Brown said.

He criticized congressmen and congresswomen for raising their pay to $125,000 "on top of their free haircuts and bounced checks."

His first step to revitalize the economy would be the creation of a civilian work corps to finish public works projects, he said.

◆ Gubernatorial race

Former governor Curtis may be running for governor in 1994

AUGUSTA (AP) — Former Gov. Kenneth M. Curtis would likely face a crowded field of competitors if he seeks the Democratic nomination for governor in 1994, a party leader said this week.

Curtis is among the half dozen or so whose names have been mentioned as possible contenders for governor, said Jo Karr, chairwoman of the state Democratic Committee.

Among the others who may be interested, said Karr, are Joseph E. Brennan, who was governor from 1979 to 1987 and who narrowly lost a gubernatorial bid to incumbent Republican Gov. John R. McKernan.

Secretary of State William Diamond, Lewiston Mayor James Howanec, state Rep. John A. Cashman of Old Town, Rep. Anne Rand of Portland and the former state Sen.

Barbara Trafton of Auburn are also on the list of possibilities, Karr said.

But candidates out of the party's mainstream may also be prompted to run out of frustration with ongoing fiscal troubles plaguing the state, Karr said.

"So many people are upset about the government in Augusta not being as good as it should be, I think you're going to see a lot more grassroots activism," said Karr, adding she expects a crowded field of Democrats to emerge as 1994 draws closer.

The latest name to surface is that of Curtis, the president of Maine Maritime Academy, who has been an outspoken critic of the state's fiscal management as the budget crisis has continued.

Curtis, who was governor from 1967 to 1975, said he will decide during the coming year whether he is serious about running for a third term. He said he has been encouraged to run by many people, but has not discussed the idea formally with state party leaders.

"I have been giving it some thought but I have no plans at this time to run for public office," Curtis was quoted as saying Tuesday by a spokesman for Maine Maritime.

The spokesman added that Curtis finds the idea of running again "intriguing."

In an interview with Guy Gannett News Service, Curtis said, "Somebody is going to have to come forward and start talking about the future of this state, instead of thinking about how they're going to keep being elected."

On the Republican side, party leaders hoping to extend GOP stewardship of the Blaine House also predict as many as a half dozen candidates may step forward.

"I don't think there's any shortage of candidates on either side," said GOP state Chairman Edward O'Meara. Like his Democratic counterpart, O'Meara also stressed that the election is still nearly three years off and a lot can change in the meantime.

O'Meara acknowledged he's been asked about running for governor, but said he has no such plans. He said Rollin Ives, the state Human Services commissioner, is interested in a possible run.

Others who may be interested include U.S. Rep. Olympia J. Snowe, who represents Maine's 2nd District, Assistant Senate Minority Leader Pamela L. Cahill, and business regulation Commissioner Susan Collins, said O'Meara.

◆ Presidential search

Vacancy—the sequel

In times like these, it's every gender neutral person for him/her/itself. This theory is evidenced by the imminent departure of Interim President John Hitt to become the new president of the University of Central Florida.

One cannot blame a person for career ambition, and since Hitt never intended to become UMaine's new president, then people cannot and should not be angry with him.

What then, does this episode mean to us? It means the University's search committee needs to be careful when choosing our next president.

Besides having an excellent career behind him/her, the candidate has to have another quality—he or she must see the University of Maine as something more than an interim stepping stone to a better position. UMaine has to be the place they really want to work at, not the place to work at so they can, in five years or so, get to the place they really want to work at.

The University of Maine has more to offer than being a nice entry on a resume or a mid-level stepping stone to an institution with bigger budgets, sports programs and student populations.

We need a president who possesses many things, intelligence, good business sense and concern for students, faculty and staff—not a hidden agenda.

The University of Maine is too fine of an institution to demand anything less than a president who puts the university's needs before his or her own.

Because it won't take much more before the students start agreeing with the administrators—and head south. (MAA)

◆ Parking concerns

Show some consideration

Lack of consideration was the phrase of the day on Wednesday as the UMaine Department of Public Safety closed a major section of the gym lot to provide parking for the Board of Trustees. Once again, the closing of this lot was done without prior notice to commuter students who rely the lot.

This attitude of catering to the BOT, big business, the Alumni Association and potential students at the cost of commuter students must be reevaluated.

A perfect example of this occurred on Wednesday when the university reserved parking spaces for the BOT in commuter section of the gym lot. This lot is a considerable walk to Wells Commons, the site of the meeting. The residential lot between Chi-Omega and Sigma Nu is the closest lot to Wells Commons—why then was a commuter lot closed?

Also, when the Alumni Association has an event at the Maine Center for the Arts as they did several weeks ago, the commuter lot down the road was closed—although proper warning was given. Why wasn't the staff lot across the street closed as it is much closer to MCA?

When potential students arrive in droves of school buses the steam plant commuter lot is closed.

In this case, as with nearly all others, many extra parking spots that were cordoned off were never used for the intended purpose of providing "special" parking because of improper planning.

To those who oversee the parking, whether it be Public Safety, Facilities Management or the occupants of Alumni Hall, have some consideration for the commuter students and their parking areas.

A simple solution to the problem, aside from an apology, would be a note in future parking rules and regulations stating, "Parking lots may be closed without notice throughout the year, please prepare for the potential inconvenience." (JBB)

Making messages that matter

Michael Reagan

The trouble with people's response to repression, tyranny, and general malaise is there only seem to be three forms. And that's the problem. Somewhere in between these three ought to allow disgruntled individuals to act in quiet ways.

Form one: a lot of people grumble, make jokes, and say something should be done about whatever the problem is. This form of passive anger is very popular in Russia, which probably is the world's leading center of sarcastic jokes.

Form two: a few people protest and picket while a lot of people watch or ignore them. This happens a lot around here with various protests from the likes of MPAC and other activist-type groups. Sure, some of people walking by may agree with them, but they aren't going to make a scene.

Form three: mobs of people are enraged and are willing to go to the streets and chant and yell for change despite the risks. For a recent analogy, there is Boris Yeltsin's standing on a tank while thousands of Muscovites rallied to his defense and put up barricades.

The trouble is when most people think of successful movements of oppressed people, images like Moscow and the French Revolution come to mind.

For democracies like ours, it usually does not come to that. Leaders tend to be smart enough to at least pretend to listen to people with gripes and say how concerned they are.

That's the problem with democracy. There are definite ways to have gripes aired but it's tough to pay attention to boring meetings and legislative sessions to make sure.

The Russians lived under a repressive regime for decades but when many of them stood up against a coup, they knew when they had succeeded. Gorbachev came back from the Crimea. Yeltsin waved the Russian flag to cheering throngs, music played, and if it was a movie there would be a fadeout.

When a legislator or governor promises to be concerned about education, that's a different matter. Because the innerworkings of government are tedious and boring as hell. Sometimes it seems the politicians who are most successful are the ones with insomnia.

Keeping tabs on your friendly neighborhood pol can be tough, as well. There are committee meetings, hearings, votes, amendments, and vetoes. There are flip flops and changed votes. Obeying a screaming mob is easier.

The trouble with mobs, though, is that they can be fickle. Look at George Bush. Desert Storm hero nine months ago and now he's the guy who doesn't do much about our economy. The same can go for the budget crisis. Different parts of the mob have different priorities, whether it's no no taxes, saving primary education, or saving the UMaine system.

But people concerned about the current budget implosion should not have to storm the Bastille in order to get their point across. The ways of getting messages across may not be as dramatic, but attention is given to them.

There are postcards, letters, and phone calls. Sure they are not like the dramatic stuff in A Tale of Two Cities, but you don't have to worry about the guillotine either.

There are more direct ways too, like handing copies of Hubris to members of the Board of Trustees with the headline "The Big Screw" written in large type on the front page with a caricature of the BOT on it.

Etiquette aside, making some kind of noise is important in order to get anyone with some kind of power to pay attention.

There's also a trap a lot of people are falling into, however. Since the horrid state of Maine's economy is no one's fault, then there's no reason to get mad at legislators who are making cuts, some might say. The terrible economy Maine has is not directly anyone's fault, but the cuts have to be made with a lot of care. The governor and legislators may say how angst-ridden they are, but that's no excuse for dismembering UMaine and the UMaine System.

As it was said at the rally on Wednesday, one of the best messages students can give to the BOT and the Legislature is "we'll be watching." It's a nice vigilant way via letter or phone call to keep them worried and keep the UMaine relatively intact.

Michael Reagan is from Portland, Maine. And he's never been interested in any deer.

◆ Maine Review

Magazine unbiased but selective

To the editor:

The Maine Review is the University of Maine's undergraduate literary magazine. While all students of the University of Maine are encouraged to submit, Maine Review does have guidelines. The first thing that we do when we receive a submission is to separate it from the name of the writer. We know nothing about the people who wrote them until after they have been reviewed and accepted or rejected.

We have adopted this "blind review" policy because we know how easy it is to be biased. Extra care is taken to avoid this trap. In the next issue of Maine Review, there are a few things by people we know, but the vast majority of the work is by people who were completely unknown to us beforehand. It is hard to have personal biases about people whom you know nothing about.

We are telling you this because Jennifer Dominici (Response Page, Wednesday, Nov. 20) has accused us of being a clique.

We are definitely not a clique, unless it is a clique of anonymous individuals whom we do not know, who do not know us, and who may or may not know each other.

Maine Review is published by a group of students who volunteer their time to produce this magazine. Any student who is willing to work is encouraged to join this staff. Anyone interested can get in touch with us through the English Department.

Jennifer accuses us of deciding to publish what we feel is the best. Of course we do! What else would you have us do? Publish what we consider be in need of work? Not look at anything before we print it so we can be absolutely sure that we avoid any chance of bias?

Who would this be serving if we did this? No literary magazine publishes every single piece it receives. Publishing a piece of work that is bad discredits the magazine and makes the writer of the work look like a fool. What good would this do?

Please remember that when you submit your work to Maine Review and it gets rejected, we are not rejecting you, we are rejecting your work alone. There is a difference.

◆ ROTC response

Changes should not be made irrationally

To the editor:

The Nov. 15 issue of The Maine Campus published an article entitled "Open to all qualified students" as an "ROTC Response." The article, by Michael Howard from the Department of Philosophy, posed basic questions about a policy of exclusion which disallows other than those with heterosexual tendencies to be contracted for commissioning purposes with the Reserve Officer Training Corps programs. This Department of Defense Policy is imbedded in law and requires change at that level.

I agree with and support Professor Howard's right to disagree. I appreciate the content of his debate and respect his willingness to articulate his concern and disagreement. I do not concur in his proposed process, however. This as a flagrant violation of his intellectual character.

Professor Howard's suggestion that the resolution to the issue he disagrees with is to "exert pressure on them to change the policy by cutting our ties with some or all of the programs ..." is neither rational nor reasonable. It does not reflect responsible behavior by an academic leader and brain trust member.

It is rather a "hostage taking" action and represents a radical, irrational approach to problem solving. It facilitates and perpetuates discriminatory practices by limiting educational choices and career decisions by those who have no control.

I encourage Professor Howard to operate and rely upon the democratic systemic principles and procedures that are available to him. In other words, be part of the solution as opposed to part of the problem.

To anticipate less would be equally derelict. The heart of his academic integrity indeed lies in the manner in which he executes its primary product—ideas! Professor Howard, no matter how well intentioned he may think his purpose, is insulting that integrity.

◆ Controversy Series

Union a platform for ideas

To the editor:

On Wednesday, Nov. 20 The Editor received a letter from the coordinating committee of the Marxist/Socialist Study Group. They mentioned they have been presenting a series entitled "Controversy" at the Memorial Union for the last six years.

The writers continued by indicating they were a group of like-minded individuals having their own agenda and bias. "Controversy" is their forum for their ideas. It is not their intention to present a "balanced" program.

This was not understood by many people attending the Nov. 24 program focusing of ROTC and was stressful for some in attendance.

Everyone should know the Memorial Union helps facilitate these programs by providing a meeting place, advertising the series and other miscellaneous support, including funding.

If there are other members of our community who have different opinions and attitudes on a variety of issues, and need a meeting room and help with advertising, the union can also be your platform for expressing these ideas.

My office is on the second floor of the union as you proceed toward Hauck. Please stop by, I would be more than happy to discuss your programming ideas with you.

◆ Music Column

Heavy metal music very underrated

To the editor:

I am writing in response to Michael Reagan's "A Modern Musical Scourge" column of Nov. 25. Michael's obvious ignorance about the heavy metal genre and the music itself is appalling.

First, he labels heavy metal the music of "white trash." Am I worthless because I'm a head-banger and white? This from a paper that supposedly abhors racism/sexism/discriminatory views? I can't say "freshman" yet he may label me "white trash"? And this from a person who says some music may end a few prejudices. Obviously whatever Michael listens to doesn't accomplish this goal.

As far as metal goes, I've been (and still am) a fan, performer, and DJ. My hair is very short, and I do not try to look "bad." I spend my money as I see fit, and I'm sorry that Michael feels that jeans, magazines, and American cars are all such a waste of my cash.

How can he intelligently comment on this topic? He references two metal bands in his entire article, neither being full blown metal or remotely representative of the current heavy metal scene in existence today. If Michael would listen to some current metal, he might see the vast growth that has occurred in the past 20 years.

I challenge Michael to give metal a chance. Maybe he should put aside his cherished Queen Latifah record and slide on a little Slayer or Suicidal Tendencies. If he could get past stereotyping the music by the name of the band, he may just open himself up to a underrated and important artform.

◆ Blonde Column

Complaints were unwarranted

To the editor:

Your column about blondes was very interesting to me. I didn't like it, but I got a lot of new jokes.

Why did you talk about yourself so much in that thing anyway? You talked about how much you get laid, how big your breasts are, and how you're tough enough to change the oil in your car. I'm sure McQuick's misses your business.

But what do we care about how much sex you are getting? If you were getting some action, you wouldn't be writing about it. Instead you come across as a little desperate.

Maybe you should take out a personal ad in your paper because you probably could need some help.

No one's really got blond hair anyway. Most "blondes" get their hair bleached at the hairdressers or do it themselves. You're just a brunette who bleached her hair to get attention. If you stop using the stuff you might tell dumb blond jokes yourself. What's the big deal anyway? There are lots more jokes about dumb Frenchmen and Polaks and no one's complaining.

But since you admit you've cried like a baby to get out of trouble and say you've got a revolving door in your bedroom, you deserve the jokes because you fit them.

The only bombs you've got are the lame complaints you give, because you deserve to hear them.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY:
Slated for success, you must be careful not to lose your sense of fair play in your rise to the top. Greed and insensitivity have an way of creeping into your life without notice. The sting of failure can do your soul some good, as you can better appreciate the struggles and greatness of your fellow man.

ARIES (March 20 — April 19): It can be a frustrating process, but progress will be made on problems this morning. Narrow the field by weeding out possibilities until you find your answer.

TAURUS (April 20 — May 20): It's easy to come on too strong and cause others to back away today. This is not the time to charge every red cape someone waves in front of you!

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Insisting that others meet standards of honesty isn't unreasonable, except to those who want to take advantage of you. Accept advice only from a small circle of friends.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): A loss of confidence is the seed from which self-destructive behavior grows. Today it's wise to project self assurance outward, even if you don't feel it inward.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Logic and discipline are the rulers of your chart now. This suggests the necessity of making decisions which will incur some unpopularity with friends or co-workers.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): When it comes to personal affairs, discretion is the better part of valor! Don't engage in idle gossip.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 23): Someone may be spreading lies about someone you love. A lie told a thousand times is still a lie: repetition does not establish truth.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 — Nov. 21): Free advice is worth less than you pay for it today. Conflicting private interests can make "words of wisdom" potentially expensive! Take your own advice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Your priorities come first, despite complaints of others. Although it's not your favorite thing to do, don't be slow is asking for assistance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Your alert mental flexibility is a big factor in your success when the Sun squares Jupiter. Don't pass up a social invitation for the evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): While a family member's imagination can supply endless excuses against positive change in their life, you're no longer willing to hear them.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — March 19): Faced with a choice between work and the needs of a loved one, you won't agonize for long over the decision. Love and family come first, the rest of the world a distant second.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY:

Eager to learn, you possess a good memory and a creative imagination. You have the ability to become a master in your chosen field, be it mechanic or brain surgeon. Often reserved and socially uncomfortable, those who know you appreciate your insight and bizarre sense of humor.

ARIES (March 20 — April 19) : When you decide not to compromise on an issue, you're about as movable as Gibraltar. Psychic ability is also noted in your chart today.

TAURUS (April 20 — May 20) : You feel duty to make one last effort to change a superior's mind, but in your heart you know it's futile. Nothing is gained from from it.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20) : Others misjudge your intentions, even your closest friends often mistake your motivations. Geminis are able to work magic and make apprehensions of others disappear.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22) : While the plans of an associate sound innocent enough, watch out, you're dealing with someone who doesn't play at leisure activities, he attacks them.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22) : Your sense of humor will be tickled by a youngster's attempt to deceive you. Their motives are so transparent, despite their best efforts to be subtle, that it's hard to be angry.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22) : Personal concerns which demanded your attention during the work week are only of secondary importance. The needs of love and commitment must come first.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 23) : Your support enables someone you love to keep faith in their ambitions. You may not receive the thanks you deserve, but there will be other rewards.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 — Nov. 21) : A destabilizing influence is at work among your stars, making it impossible to predict the actions or reactions of others with any real hope of accuracy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21) : Spontaneous decisions involving a family member are certain to backfire. You simply can't take all the factors influencing their actions into account.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19) : Conflicting astrological forces council patience and delay at home today. A neighbor's boastful one-up-manship does not need be taken seriously.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18) : Your taste for the new and unusual may catch more conventional friends slightly off guard. Do you mind being the object of their gossip?

PISCES (Feb. 19 — March 19) : You have the clout to organize friends and neighbors to work for changes you desire within your community! People trust your motives more than others.

common sense, and we've lost him," he said.

Littlefield also expressed disappointment in the University of Maine Board of Trustees decision earlier this year to not allow Hitt the opportunity of applying for the UMaine presidency.

"I think it was one of the biggest screw-ups the BOT made by not allowing him (Hitt) to apply for the position. Now he's hard it is to make decisions like that."

But Reed said it was Hitt's "performance and experience at Maine that really made the difference."

"We're just really pleased that he will be joining us in Florida," he said.

Reed said the details of Hitt's departure have not yet been determined.

According to Hitt, Woodbury and Reed will be discussing a "departure date with an eye on the earliest date which would be fair to both the University of Maine and the University of Central Florida."

Reed also said Hitt's salary has not been determined. His UMaine salary is about $115,000 with monthly stipends. UCF Interim president Robert Byram's salary is $140,000.

According to Reed, Hitt is scheduled to a three-day visit to Florida next week.

As UCF's next president, Hitt will be replacing Interim President Robert Byram, who replaced former UCF President Steven Altman in June.

"He (Hitt) was a great person who had the ability to understand the way the campus worked. He certainly wasn't your Teflon president—he was down to earth and had

According to Reed, UCF's presidential search was one of the "closest ever."

Reed said three of the six UCF presidential finalists dropped out as contenders, narrowing the search to "three of the best candidates we've ever had. I didn't realize how

Pan Am out of business right before Christmas season

By Catherine Wilson
AP Business Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Pan Am passengers scrambled to re-book flights during the heaviest travel time of the season and 7,500 employees found themselves out of work three weeks before Christmas when the once-glorious airline went under.

The airline, which pioneered commercial aviation, abruptly shut down Wednesday after losing its battle to erase years of losses.

Chanda Sharan of Jonesboro, Ga., sat in a baggage area at Miami International Airport with her two young daughters on their interrupted flight from Atlanta to Mexico City. But she seemed more concerned about Pan Am workers than her own predicament.

"I feel bad," she said. "I'm originally from India, and we always flew on Pan Am. It's been in this country for so long."

The shutdown stranded thousands of passengers around the country, including 100 people removed from a flight to the Dominican Republic just before takeoff from New York's Kennedy Airport.

Several airlines said they would honor

Pan Am tickets. But finding comparable flights during the busy holiday season is going to be difficult for many, said John Lindsey, a Pan Am vice president.

"It's going to be tight," he said.

"We're all in shock," he added. "It's very, very tough for a 64-year-old airline and all the people who have gone through this."

Many employees left jobless were transferring to Miami from other cities as part of a plan to transform the carrier into a smaller airline focusing on Latin America. That plan that fell apart on Tuesday.

Pilot Terry Barnes got the news when he radioed from the air for the gate numbers of connecting flights. He was told there wouldn't be any connecting flights.

Harry Tomisaka, a 23-year fleet service veteran from San Francisco, walked into work Wednesday — payday — and found he no longer had a job. "We came up to work and they just told us we couldn't go in," he said.

Pan Am became the third U.S. airline to die this year, after Eastern and Midway, amid deep industry-wide troubles brought on by the Gulf War and the recession. Pan Am bookings also were crippled by the 1988 terrorist bombing of Flight 103 over Scotland.

hike was also expressed in a letter sent to the Trustees by local representatives John O'Dea, Mary Cathcart, and State Senator Steven Bost. "After reviewing the Board's recommendations, we are deeply concerned that the large share of proposed budget cutbacks have been targeted at programs and positions that directly impact learning experience within the various campuses of the university system.

"We are also concerned about the Board's reliance on tuition increases during a time when students and their families are finding it more difficult than ever to afford a college education," the letter said.

In addition, these representative suggested in the letter that the BOT make cuts in the "University administration, peripheral programs and duplication of services."

Shortly after the BOT's approval of the tuition increase, trustee member Harrison Richardson said the measure was "the most distasteful I've ever made."

Many others agreed with Richardson.

State Senator Stephen Bost said of the BOT's decision, "Unfortunately, it appears that every action the board takes, where there should be dissent, these decisions are unanimous, and I'm very dismayed that there was not one dissenting vote."

Bost also said he was disappointed on there being "not a word of discussion " on the letter he, O'Dea and Cathcart sent the Trustees two days before the board meeting.

Representative O'Dea said the Trustees decision marked a "sad day for the students."

O'Dea said he didn't believe the Trustees were "doing enough on behalf of the students."

"I'm still waiting to hear from the board to see that it's not business as usual. I'm hopeful, but I'm not holding my breath."

O'Dea said he, Cathcart and Bost would continue to work hard in Augusta to advocate for appropriate funding for the UMaine system.

Economics professor David Wihry said "my reaction is that the Trustees had little choice. This is an extremely difficult task for the Trustees."

Student Government Vice President Brent Littlefield said the Trustees decision was "just depressing."

"I'm just a typical student—this increase will be really rough on me. I can't imagine what it's going to be like for other people," he said.

In other cost-cutting measures, the BOT voted to close the chancellor's office in Augusta, as well as to cut waivers given to people over the age of 65 that allowed them to take their classes for free.

Judge orders US not to return Haitians

By Will Lester
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — More than 5,000 Haitian boat people remained trapped between the homeland they fled and U.S. immigration laws today after a federal judge renewed his ban on sending them back home.

U.S. District Judge C. Clyde Atkins issued a temporary injunction Tuesday night that continued, and strengthened, a Nov. 19 order halting the repatriation of Haitians stopped at sea by the Coast Guard.

The November order had been set to expire at midnight Tuesday. But Atkins said sending refugees back now could expose them to "loss of liberty or death at the hands of Haiti's military on account of (their) political beliefs."

The new order is to remain in effect until the U.S. government improves procedures for interviewing Haitians to determine whether they are entitled to asylum. Atkins asked the government to come up with better methods in the next week.

His order ensured that the number of refugees at the U.S. military base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, will continue to climb past its current level of 3,000. The military, anticipating a steady stream of Haitians, has been building camps there that could eventually hold four to five times as many people.

It's 1:15 am Friday and we have to fill this space.

Thursday evening Oliver Chamberlain spoke to faculty and staff in the Sutton Lounge in the Memorial Union.

Chamberlain, who is the executive director for the Performing and Visual Arts at the University of Lowell in Massachusetts, is one of the four finalists for the position of director of the Maine Center of the Arts. The position was left vacant after the firing of former MCA director Joel Katz last March.

Katz was dismissed for "inappropriate supervisory behavior," according to Thomas Aceto, former vice president of administration at UMaine.

Katz later reached a settlement with the university where he resigned and UMaine withdrew their dismissal.

Chamberlain was formerly the Director for the Concert Office at the Moore Musical Art Center at Bowling Green University.

The event, an informal meeting for Chamberlain to meet people interested in the future of MCA, was attended primarily by staff.

Chamberlain was asked questions about his current position as well as theoretical questions about what he would do if hired by MCA.

The first question Chamberlain responded to was what interaction he had with the booking of acts in his past positions.

"I receive about four or five calls a day from agents as well as press packets and videos on a daily basis," Chamberlain said.

Chamberlain also explained that the agents and their acts come "from New York to San Francisco."

Chamberlain said that if one was interested in an artist "you have to do what you have to do" to get the act to appear.

Chamberlain also seemed to have experience with the financial part of running an arts center.

"Once I saved three or four thousand dollars with a five minute call by negotiating for a lower rate," Chamberlain said.

Chamberlain said he had also used the fact he operated a 1,000 seat art center at University of Lowell to the financial benefit of the center, as often the size is a factor in the amount the performers could demand.

Chamberlain was also asked about how he fosters team play in his staff.

"I try to treat them (staff members) as individuals, and that can create a (positive) atmosphere in a small office. I try to treat them with respect," Chamberlain said.

Chamberlain also said if he treated staff members in this fashion, the staff would "do the same with each other."

Chamberlain unveiled an idea of how he would like to incorporate the community with both the Hudson Museum and the MCA.

His idea involved the university hosting field trips for grade school children, with a chance for the children to explore the museum, then watch a performance at the MCA. Teachers would book field trips and bus the children to MCA.

"It is possible to do something at the museum, see a performance, in the same day," he said.

"It is an idea I would like to explore," Chamberlain said.

◆ Kennedy Smith trial

Florida woman testifies of alleged rape by Kennedy Smith

By Linda Deutsch
Associated Press Writer

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A weeping woman told a jury Wednesday that William Kennedy Smith raped her on the lawn of his family's estate.

She said she screamed and tried to fight him off, but he slammed his body on top of hers and said, "Stop it, Bitch!"

"I was yelling 'no,' and 'stop' and I tried to get my arm out to get him off of me and he slammed it to the ground," she said. "And he pushed my dress up and he raped me, and I thought he was going to kill me."

If convicted, Smith could be sentenced to 4 1/2 years in prison.

At one point, she sobbed so strenuously that the prosecutor asked her if she wanted to break, but she said she wanted to continue.

Asked, "Did you consider this an act of love?" she said, "Oh God, no."

She said she ran in terror from the man she had thought was "a nice guy" when they met at a nightclub earlier that night. She suggested he underwent a personality change, suddenly pouncing upon her without warning and with no sexual suggestions.

After the rape, she said, she ran into the Kennedy house and tried to hide, but "I could hear him yelling for me."

She said she called her friend to come get her and was shaking so badly she tried to steady herself on a table, but Smith pursued her.

"He grabbed me by the arm. I thought he was going to kill me," she said.

She said Smith pulled her into another room. "He was real different," she said. "I was telling him, 'You've raped me. How could you do this?' He was sitting there very smug and he said, 'I didn't rape you.'"

When she said she would call the police, she said Smith told her, "No one will believe you."

She said she didn't call police until the next day because, "I was too terrified of him, his family's power."

The woman said she doesn't remember clearly everything that happened when she went with Smith to the Kennedy estate.

"Why are you not able to remember clearly?" asked prosecutor Moira Lasch.

"Because I was raped," the woman said. She said Smith never made any sexual suggestions to her and she felt "in no danger" when she agreed to give him a ride home.

The prosecutor asked if she expected to have sex with Smith and she said no. "I did not want to have sex with him and I said no such thing," she said.

Bucks Coach Harris resigns

Del Harris, in his fifth season as coach of the Milwaukee Bucks, resigned Wednesday and will be replaced by his top assistant, Frank Hamblen.

Harris will remain vice president of basketball operations for the NBA team.

Harris' announcement came a day after the Bucks rolled to a 126-94 victory over the Los Angeles Lakers at the Bradley Center. He said he wants to devote his time to his front office duties.

Since Harris became head coach of the Bucks on June 4, 1987, he has compiled a 191-154 record. The Bucks are 8-9 this season.

Hamblen, 44, has been with the Bucks organization for four years. He has been either an assistant coach or scout in the NBA or ABA for the past 22 seasons.

Flyers fire Holmgren

The last place Philadelphia Flyers, who missed the Stanley Cup playoffs the past two seasons, fired Coach Paul Holmgren Wednesday and hired head scout Bill Dineen to replace him.

Dineen, 59, a veteran coach and scout, is the father of Flyers right wing Kevin Dineen. Bill Dineen joined the Flyers staff last season scouting mainly the Ontario region.

This is his first head coaching job in the NHL.

Dineen spent five years in the NHL as a right winger, mostly with the Detroit Red Wings.

He started coaching as a player-coach in Denver in the Western Hockey League, then moved to Houston and New England in the now defunct World Hockey Association, and Adirondack of the American Hockey League.

In 13 seasons with Houston, Hartford and Adirondack, Dineen's record was 565-381-80. He won two AHL championships at Adirondack.

The Flyers are winless in seven games, 8-14-2 overall and in last place in the Patrick Division of the NHL. They are 1-9-2 against division opponents.

Willis, Thomas fined by NBA

Kevin Willis of the Atlanta Hawks was fined $3,500 and Isiah Thomas of the Detroit Pistons was fined $3,000 by the NBA on Wednesday for an incident during a game last Wednesday night.

Thomas was fouled by Willis while driving the lane with 1:59 left and the scored tied 90-90 in the game eventually won by Detroit 100-91. Willis was called for a flagrant foul and Thomas for a technical for retaliating.

Holtz to stay at Notre Dame

Lou Holtz signed a five-year contract extension Thursday to coach Notre Dame through the 1996 season, ending speculation that he might leave to take over the Minnesota Vikings next year.

UMaine looks to tame high-scoring Wildcats

By Tim Hopley
Sports Writer

Two of the Hockey East's top teams clash this weekend at Alford Arena, as the 9-1 University of Maine Black Bears and the 8-2 University of New Hampshire Wildcats collide in a key early-season match-up.

The Black Bears are coming off a three-win week while the 'Cats dropped two in a row (Alaska-Anchorage and Clarkson 5-4 each), their first losses on the season after an all-time best 8-0 start.

Sparked by HE Player of the Week Domenic Amodeo (13 goals, 12 assists-25 points), the 'Cats are looking to snap a winless streak at Alford which dates back to Feb. 3, 1985. Further, UMaine has won 16 of the last 17 games, with the UNH win coming at Snively Arena on Feb. 3, 1989 (4-2).

Seniors Joe Flanagan (11-13-24) and Savo Mitrovic (6-16-22) are other key offensive threats for Coach Dick Umile, who will play without Scott Morrow (fighting suspension), Jesse Cooper (fighting suspension) and Greg Klym (knee injury). The loss of Morrow will hurt most as the senior had 10 goals this year, while Klym added seven assists and nine points.

Netminder Jeff Levy has been outstanding between the pipes for the 'Cats. The HE Rookie of the Year a season ago is picking up where he left off, compiling a 7-2 record with a 3.06 goals against average thus far.

For the Black Bears, Coach Shawn Walsh sees the weekend series as a "great early season challenge" for UMaine.

"We must play physical to be successful against New Hampshire," Walsh said. "They have great offensive skills and if we aren't on our checking game we could be in trouble. They are the highest scoring team in the league (5.7 goals per game)."

When it comes to scoring the Black Bears are no slouches themselves, having scored 54 goals in 10 games. Led by first line members Jim Montgomery (6-18-24), Jean-Yves Roy (10-9-19) and Brian Downey (7-12-19), UMaine has now won six in a row and hopes to continue the recent dominance of UNH at home.

The Black Bears received an added boost last week as sophomore standout goalie Mike Dunham returned to action after missing a little more than a month with a broken pinky, giving Walsh a pleasant dilemma. Walsh said both goaltenders have looked sharp in practice and he's leaning towards returning to the alternating system he used effectively last year in winning 32 games.

"They've both looked real good this

No. 12 UConn: a large task for Black Bears

By Chad Finn
Sports Writer

The University of Maine men's basketball team faces its toughest challenge of the young season Saturday when they travel to Storrs, Conn. to take on the 12th-ranked University of Connecticut Huskies.

Last season UMaine played an inspired first-half against the talent-laden Huskies and trailed by only three points at the intermission. But the Huskies cranked up the defensive intensity in the second-half and forced the Black Bears into 24 turnovers as they pulled away to an 85-60 victory.

The Black Bears, 3-2 on the season, are coming off of a big 69-66 win over Coppin State Tuesday in which they snapped the Eagles' 24-game home winning streak. UMaine Coach Rudy Keeling thinks his squad heads into this year's UConn game with much more confidence than they did last season.

"Obviously we'd have to play a very good game to beat (UConn), but we are coming off a big win against a pretty good team. We gained some confidence by playing talented teams like Miami (62-57 loss) and Iowa State (70-63 loss) close in the San Juan Shoot-out, and I think we'll make a game of it Saturday."

UConn, 3-0, is led by a pair of skillful All-America candidates. Six-foot-two senior guard Chris Smith, a first-team All-Big East Conference selection a year ago, is the primary offensive weapon for the Huskies.

Smith is averaging 18.7 points per game and is coming off of his best effort of the season, a 24-point outing against Wake Forest. Last season, Smith lit up the Black Bears for 20 points on 7 of 13 shooting.

Six-foot-six forward Scott Burrell, considered one of the more talented juniors in the nation, leads UConn in several statistical categories. He tops the team in scoring at 21.0 ppg, while placing first on the club with 10 assists and eight steals on the year. And, for good measure, he pulls down just over seven rebounds per contest.

According to Keeling, both Smith and Burrell present big match-up problems defensively for UMaine.

"I'm not sure who is going to guard either one of them yet," said Keeling. "But whoever it is will definitely have their hands full. Both are excellent all-around players, and Burrell seems to have kicked his game up another level."

Other starters for the Huskies include 6'9" senior center Rod Sellers, 6'7" junior forward Torraino Walker, and 6'9" freshman Donyell Marshall.

Sellers contributes 14.7 ppg and 9.3 rpg, while Walker averages 4.7 ppg and 4.7 rpg. Marshall has struggled on the offensive end (30.3% field goal percentage, 7.7 ppg) but he leads UConn with nine blocked shots.

UMaine has been carried thus far by senior captain and floor-leader Marty Higgins. He leads the Black Bears in scoring (12 ppg), assists (21), steals (13) and minutes

UMaine looks for first win versus Cleveland St. Vikings

By Tim Hopley
Sports Writer

Sara Bone sank seven free throws as Dartmouth (3-1) used a 10-point advantage from the foul line to defeat the University of Maine women's basketball team 60-55 in Hanover, NH, Wednesday.

UMaine outshot the Big Green 24-22 from the floor, including 2-1 from beyond the three point line, but only converted five of 13 free throws. Dartmouth made 15 of its 18 foul shots.

Bone scored 22 points overall. Brandi Jones added 17 points, including five free throws. Renee Reed scored 10.

Tracey Frenette and Heather Briggs provided much of the Black Bear offense, netting 17 and 14 points, respectively.

UMaine took a 22-19 first half lead into the locker room but were unable to sustain the advantage as Coach Trish Roberts' Black Bears again played without starters Jess Carpenter (ankle) and Chris Strong (knee).

The loss drops UMaine to 0-4 on the young season, their worst start since 1983-84 when that team started 0-3 but finished 16-11 overall.

Next Up for UMaine

Next up for the Black Bears is the Fairfield University Invitational Tournament Friday and Saturday. UMaine plays Cleveland St. in the tourney opener which includes Central Connecticut as well as the host Lady Stags.

Cleveland St. comes in at 0-2 on the season and hoping to improve on last years 7-21 mark. They sport a new coach as well as a new style of play in which the three-point will be a key weapon.

Six-foot Lanette Taylor, a senior who led the North Star Conference in rebounding a season ago, has picked up where she left off for the Vikings, grabbing 13 in the teams' first game. She also averages 12 points a contest. Sophomore guard Lynnette Hodge lends a helpful hand as she popped in 15 and pulled down 10 boards in the opening loss. Kristen Grant (5'6"), Lori Johnson (5'7"), Corretta Walker (5'8"), Hodge and Chee-Chee Crenshaw (6'0") start for Cleveland St.

Heather Briggs (5'10") and Tracey Frenette (6'0") start in the frontcourt for the Black Bears along with Cyndi Buetow (6'2"), Julie Bradstreet (5'8") and Carrie Goodhue (5'9").

UConn Huskies

played (36.8 per game), but has been battling injuries of late.

Higgins, still recovering from a pulled groin muscle suffered in pre-season, dislocated a finger in the Iowa State game that contributed to seven turnovers two days later against Coppin State. The Black Bears could be in for a very long night trying to advance the ball against the dangerous Husky press if Higgins can't go.

Sophomore forward Francois Bouchard has started slowly for UMaine, he is averaging nine points and seven rebounds per game after averaging 13.3 ppg and 6.2 rpg a year ago. Bouchard scored 15 points against UConn in last season's contest while playing solid defense.

"He'll have to have a big game on both ends of the floor for us to stay in it," said Keeling.

Another key for the Black Bears is whether Dan Hillman will be able to play. Hillman sprained his ankle against Iowa State and did not play against Coppin State.

"We'll need his size (6'9") in there on the boards and for defensive purposes," Keeling said. "He'll definitely be a key for us if he can play."

If Hillman can't play, sophomore Ed Jones (7.0 ppg.) will likely replace him. Jones leads the Black Bears with eight blocks early on in the season.

Sophomore Kevin Terrell (10 ppg) will start at the shooting guard spot for Keeling while junior Fritz Marseille (8.4 ppg, 3.8 rpg) and sophomore Kenny Barnes (4.8 ppg) are candidates for the small forward slot.

"We'll get to see how we measure up against one of the better teams in the country and we can only benefit from playing a team like (UConn). It gives our program more exposure, which helps our recruiting. By playing a team like them, we really have nothing to lose," Keeling said.

Howard, Detmer lead AP squad

By Rick Warner
AP Football Writer

Heisman Trophy favorite Desmond Howard of Michigan, first-year phenom Marshall Faulk of San Diego State and all-time passing leader Ty Detmer of Brigham Young were named to the 1991 Associated Press All-America college football team on Thursday.

Howard was a triple-threat wide receiver who averaged 159 yards per game and was the nation's second leading scorer with 23 touchdowns. Two of his TD's came on a 98-yard kickoff return and a 93-yard punt return.

Faulk led the country in rushing and scoring, the first first-year player to finish in the top in either category. He is only the third first-year player to make the AP first-team since they became eligible for varsity competition in 1972. The others were Georgia's Herschel Walker in 1980 and Pittsburgh's Tony Dorsett in 1973.

Despite missing three games with an injury, Faulk rushed for 1,429 yards and scored 140 points. He gained 386 yards against Pacific, setting an NCAA record that was later broken by Kansas' Tony Sands.

Detmer, last year's Heisman Trophy winner, is the only repeater from the 1990 team. He is the first quarterback to make the first unit in consecutive years since Notre Dame's Johnny Lujack in 1946-47.

Detmer was the nation's No. 2 passer this season, completing 249 of 403 throws for 4,031 yards and 35 touchdowns. He finished his career with more passing yards (15,031) and TD passes (121) than anyone in NCAA history, two of his 68 passing and offensive records.

Joining Detmer and Faulk in the backfield is Indiana's Vaughn Dunbar, the nation's No. 2 rusher with 154-yard average. Although he only played two years for the Hoosiers, Dunbar finished his career as the scholi's third-leading rusher and TD scorer.

Ryan Benjamin of Pacific, who led the NCAA in all-purpose yardage with 2,996, is the squad's all-purpose back. His total yardage for rushing, receiving and kick returning was the second highest ever behind Barry Sanders' 3,250 in 1988. Benjamin is the first Pacific player to make the AP's first team.

Mario Bailey of Washington is the other wide receiver and Kelly Blackwell of Texas Christian is the tight end.

Bailey set school marks for catches (62) and touchdown receptions (17) in a season, and became the career leader at Washington in receiving yards and TD catches. Blackwell caught 64 passes for 762 yards this season, and set an NCAA career mark for receptions by a tight end (181).

Rounding out the offense are center Jay Leeuwenburg of Colorado; guards Jerry Ostroski of Tulsa and Jeb Flesch of Clemson; tackles Greg Skrepenak of Michigan and Bob Whitfield of Stanford; and place-kicker Carlos Huerta of Miami.

The defense is led by a pair of Outland Trophy finalists, linemen Steve Emtman on Washington and Sanata Dotson of Baylor.

Emtman was the leader of the nation's top defense, which limited opponents to 237 yards and 9.2 points per game. He had 19 1/2 tackles for losses, including 6 1/2 sacks, and intercepted one pass. Dotson led a strong Baylor defense with 60 tackles, four sacks, a fumble recovery and two blocked kicks.

They are joined by linemen Brad Culpepper of Florida and Leroy Smith of Iowa; linebackers Robert Jones of East Carolina, Marvin Jones of Florida St. and Joe Bowden of Oklahoma; and backs Kevin Smith of Texas A&M, Terrell Buckley of Florida St., Darryl Williams of Miami and Dale Carter of Tennessee.

Of note, Robert Jones made an amazing 151 tackles for East Carolina, which won its last 10 games to gain a berth in the Peach Bowl. Marvin Jones was Florida St. leading tackler with 125, including a season-high 15 against Miami.

The punter is Mark Bounds of Texas Tech.

The team includes eight underclassmen — Faulk, sophomore Marvin Jones and six juniors. The juniors are Howard, Whitfield, Benjamin, Emtman, Buckley and Williams.

Top-ranked Miami and No. 2 Washington, the only undefeated teams in Division I-A, each have two players on the first team. No. 4 Michigan and No. 5 Florida St. also placed two players on the squad.

The All-America team was selected by AP sports editor Darrell Christian, college football writer Rick Warner and regional AP sports writers. The team will be featured on the Bob Hope Christmas show, Dec. 18 from 9-10 p.m. on NBC.

White to look into Reds' Medicare

By John Nolan
Associated Press Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — National League president Bill White will ask the Cincinnati Reds next week about the former team doctor's allegations that the Reds did not provide quality medical care for players, a leagues spokeswoman said Thursday.

Spokeswoman Katy Feeney said league officials have seen only newspaper stories about Dr. Michael Lawhon's parting shot at the Reds when he quit as the team's physician.

"The league will, I'm sure, look into it and see where it all comes from," Feeney said. "Obviously, players' health is a concern."

Lawhon said he refused to lower his standards of medical care. He accused the Reds of releasing misleading reports about injuries and refusing to provide necessary equipment.

White has been away from the NL's New York offices this week and was unavailable for comment. He is to attend baseball's winter meetings which start this week-end in Miami.

"I'm sure Bill will talk to the Reds about it," Feeney said.

The major league players' union said it is looking into the allegations.

Reds general manager Bob Quinn declined Thursday to discuss the issue.

"We are not going to dignify the doctor's statements with a comment," Quinn said.

Reds outfielder Herm Winningham said he recalled the ballclub sometimes ran out of medical supplies for the trainer's office.

"The bills got lost when they reached the front office. The people who really needed in were the players," Winningham said. "Then when we ran out, we had to wait around. Dr. Lawhon was great. With what he had, he did the best he could. He got caught in the middle sometimes."

The Reds have already replaced Lawhon with Cincinnati orthopedic doctor Richard Jolson.

Outfielder Eric Davis, traded from Cincinnati to the Los Angeles Dodgers last week, said Wednesday that he "didn't get the proper level of treatment the I deserved" as he tried to come back from a lacerated kidney injury in the 1990 World Series. The ballclub put out a news release saying tests found nothing wrong with him.

Who's next in free agency

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that Bobby Bonilla has his $29 million, general managers can start to figure out what the big stars will get in the next round of salary negotiations.

Wade Boggs, Kirby Puckett, Cal Ripken and Ryne Sandberg are all entering the final seasons of multiyear contracts. Ruben Sierra, Doug Drabek, Mark McGwire, Barry Larkin, Randy Myers, David Cone and Kal Daniels could be eligible for free agency unless they sign multiyear deals this winter.

"The guys you really want, I think you're going to get them done early," Chicago White Sox general manager Ron Schueler said Tuesday.

Bonilla said he would have re-signed with Pittsburgh any time before the end of the season if the Pirates had offered $18 million for four years. Pittsburgh stayed at $16.8 million until it was too late. And when it became a bidding war, the Pirates couldn't compete.

"The Mets did what they had to do," San Francisco Giants general manager Al Rosen said. "You have to do what you think is necessary to win. Winning is everything. Losing is nothing."

The top remaining names among this year's free agents are outfielder Danny Tartabull and pitchers Frank Viola, Tom Candiotti, Mitch Williams and Alejandro Pena.

"Next year there will be another outstanding free agent who sets a new record," Rosen said. "We will keep on breaking records until my prediction of Armageddon will hit. There is no way clubs can continue to pay the salaries they're expending without some teams hitting financial difficulties."

New York has signed 10 players to 1992 contracts that total $33,295,833.

"Teams should know which players are indispensable," said agent Tom Reich, who represents Sierra. "The guys who are perennial all-stars and aren't signed or traded, the clubs have no right to complain. They have had an ample time to figure out if he fits into their next long-term plan."

Drabek, Greg Swindell, Chuck Finley and John Smiley all will be eligible for free agency after the 1992 season. Randy Hendricks, their agent, said it pays for teams to sign them earlier rather than later.

"At the start of free agency, you had the original wave of free agents who came out and there was almost an Oklahoma land-rush mentality," Hendricks said. "You go down the road a couple of years and teams realized that if they waited until the players became free agents, they lost them. So teams then signed promising young players to long-term contract and that was the procedure until it ran head on into collusion."

"Now, teams are going to have to reflect upon why a decade ago they signed their top young players. If the teams wait until they become free agents, they're likely to lose them. And if they keep them, they are likely to pay more money."

More rich players

NEW YORK (AP) — The average baseball salary was $851,492 in 1991, a 42.5 percent increase from 1990's average of $597,537.

The percentage increase was the second-highest ever in baseball, trailing only the 47.7 percent increase in 1977, the first season after free agency began. The $253,955 increase more than doubled the previous record of $100,283, which was set last season. In 1977, the dollar increase was from $51,501 to $76,066.

The Oakland Athletics, who fell to fourth place after winning three consecutive American League pennants, had the highest average at $1,394,119. The A's also led the payroll list in 1990 at $804,643.

Los Angeles rose from eighth to second, nearly doubling its average from $685,780 to $1,302,979. California rose from fifth to third at $1,136,798 while the New York Mets dropped from third to fourth at $1,113,446.

Houston, which was ninth in 1990 at $681,664, dropped to last at $395,444 after

Pressure on OC president

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Robert Helmick, accused of violating ethical rules while serving as president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, is under pressure to resign from the International Olympic Committee.

"We should treat this the same way as the Ben Johnson case," said one IOC source, referring to the Canadian Olympic sprinter who was suspended in 1988 for using steroids.

"Rules have been broken and we should apply the rules," the official said Tuesday, speaking on condition of anonymity. "It's a matter of credibility. One person can tarnish the image of the whole organization."

Helmick has been a member of the IOC since 1985. He has also been on the powerful IOC Executive Board since 1989.

He met with IOC officials here Monday and Tuesday, and is due to appear before the Executive Board Wednesday morning.

He declined comment on his intentions, saying, "The commission and I have all agreed this matter should first come before the executive committee."
